Mrs. Mathur was in the kitchen when she heard Suma crying in the garden. Quickly, she wiped her hands with a towel and threw it on the table. She did not notice that the towel had fallen very close to the stove as she rushed out of the house.

Mrs. Mathur ran to the garden. "What is the matter?" she asked her daughter. "Why are you crying, Suma?" "I have injured my ankle, mother. I can't stand up," wailed Suma.

As Mrs. Mathur was carrying her back to the house, she saw smoke coming out of the kitchen. Both the stove and the kitchen cabinet were on fire. Quickly, she went to her neighbour's house and telephoned the fire brigade.

A few minutes later, a fire engine arrived. The firemen doused the fire using a long hose. Mrs. Mathur thanked the firemen before they left.
